ABOUT THE PLAY

Yasmina Reza's dazzling comedy ran for 18 months at the Comédie des Champs-Elysées, Paris, from October 1994. Translated from the French by Christopher Hampton, it received its British premiere at Wyndham's Theatre, London in 1996 where it ran for six years. 'Art' — the word itself deliberately in quotation marks in the title — won prestigious prizes in Paris and London, as well as the best play Tony Award on Broadway.

A profound and hilarious play, 'Art' dissects the bonds among three friends when one mocks another for buying an expensive all-white contemporary painting, and the third is stuck in the uncomfortable middle. Viewed through the thematic lens of friendship, the play is about how dangerous it is to define others in terms of ourselves but 'Art' is also about art.

"[The play is] about general tolerance of what we allow in our relationships, with our friends, in our marriages, with our children and parents. Does our love extend to the fact that we tolerate somebody revolting against our political or religious beliefs?" _ The New York Times

- "....wildly funny, naughtily provocative..." _ The New York Post
- "...Reza is a fiendishly clever writer..." Newsweek
- "A remarkably wise, witty and intelligent comedy...'Art' has touched a universal nerve." The Times
